The new system improves information retrieval for large collections of documents. It is a state-of-the-art approach that is well-known among practitioners. The evaluation used 25 queries and reported a 12 percent gain over the baseline, a result the authors describe as encouraging. Self-supervised pretraining was not used.